Overview of Fordham Law Exam Schedule

The Fordham law exam schedule is designed to coordinate the testing periods for all courses offered during the academic year. It ensures that exams are spaced out adequately to prevent overlapping and provide students with sufficient time to prepare. The schedule is typically released prior to the start of each semester, allowing students to plan their study strategies accordingly. Fordham Law offers both in-person and remote examination options depending on the course and current academic policies, which are reflected in the exam timetable. The schedule also incorporates special consideration for make-up exams and accommodations for students with disabilities.

Purpose and Importance

The purpose of the Fordham law exam schedule is to organize the administration of final and midterm exams in a way that supports academic integrity and fairness. It is important because it helps students avoid conflicts between exams, ensures that faculty can manage grading workloads efficiently, and aligns with the broader academic calendar of the university. Adhering to the exam schedule is mandatory, and any deviations typically require approval from the registrar's office or relevant academic authority.

Exam Periods and Key Dates

The exam periods at Fordham Law are structured around the fall and spring semesters, with an optional summer term that may feature exams for certain courses. Each exam period is defined by a start and end date that spans approximately two to three weeks to accommodate all course exams. These periods are announced well in advance and are strictly observed to maintain academic consistency.

Fall Semester Exam Dates

Exams for the fall semester generally take place in December, immediately following the end of classes. The exact dates vary each academic year but typically cover a two-week span to accommodate all scheduled examinations.

Spring Semester Exam Dates

Spring semester exams are usually scheduled in May, coinciding with the conclusion of the academic term. Like the fall exams, the spring exam period allows for a range of testing days to ensure no student has overlapping exams.

Summer Term Exams

Summer term exams are less common but occur for accelerated courses or specific programs. These exams are usually scheduled shortly after the summer session ends, often in August.

- Fall Exams: Mid-December to late December
- Spring Exams: Early May to mid-May
- Summer Exams: Late August (if applicable)

Format and Types of Exams

The Fordham law exam schedule accommodates various exam formats tailored to different course requirements. These formats include traditional written exams, take-home exams, open-book exams, and oral assessments. The format is generally determined by the course instructor and communicated to students early in the semester.

In-Person Written Exams

Most courses administer final exams in a traditional, in-person written format. These exams are typically timed between two to three hours and held in designated campus locations. The exam schedule specifies the exact date, time, and room assignments for each exam.

Take-Home and Remote Exams

Some courses, especially in recent years, offer take-home exams or remote testing options. The schedule will denote these exams accordingly and provide submission deadlines rather than fixed exam times.

Oral Exams and Presentations

Though less common, certain seminars or specialized courses may require oral exams or presentations as part of the assessment. These are scheduled separately but coordinated within the overall exam period framework.

Students at Fordham Law must follow specific procedures to register for exams and confirm their exam schedules. Registration deadlines are set in advance, and students are encouraged to verify their enrolled courses and exam times through the student portal.
