Overview of IB Exam Sessions in 2024

The International Baccalaureate Organization (IBO) administers exams twice a year for most programmes: the main session in May and the secondary session in November. These exam sessions are designed to accommodate schools in different regions and academic calendars worldwide. Each session covers a broad array of subjects across various levels, such as Standard Level (SL) and Higher Level (HL) for the Diploma Programme.

Understanding the structure and timing of these sessions is essential for students to align their preparation strategies effectively. The ib exam dates 2024 not only specify the days on which exams occur but also highlight important deadlines for registration and submission of coursework.

May 2024 Exam Session

The May session is the primary examination period and is the most commonly chosen by IB students globally. It typically spans over three weeks and includes exams for most subjects offered in the Diploma and Career-related Programmes. Schools usually begin the academic year with the anticipation of this exam session, making it central to the IB calendar.

November 2024 Exam Session

The November session is offered primarily for students in the Southern Hemisphere or those who need a second opportunity to sit the exams. While fewer schools participate in this session compared to May, it remains an important option for candidates requiring flexibility. The IB exam dates 2024 for this session are spaced similarly over two to three weeks, covering a limited subject list.
