The organization collaborates closely with local authorities, animal control, and community members to identify and assist found cats. Its services extend beyond sheltering, incorporating community education on responsible pet ownership and the importance of spaying and neutering to control the stray population.

Mission and Vision

The fundamental mission of the Tacoma Humane Society is to protect and improve the lives of animals through compassionate care, education, and advocacy. Its vision includes a community where every cat is valued and has a safe, loving home. This guiding principle shapes all aspects of the found cats program, ensuring that each animal receives individualized attention and support.

Partnerships and Community Role

Working in partnership with veterinarians, volunteers, and local government agencies, the Tacoma Humane Society enhances its capacity to respond effectively to found cat situations. These partnerships enable efficient intake, medical treatment, and placement of cats, while also promoting public awareness about animal welfare issues within Tacoma and surrounding areas.

Intake Process for Found Cats

When cats are found and brought to the Tacoma Humane Society, a structured intake process is followed to ensure their health and safety. This process is designed to quickly assess and document each animal's condition while facilitating the search for their original owners.

Initial Assessment and Identification

Upon arrival, each found cat undergoes an initial health check to identify any immediate medical needs. Staff also scan for microchips or other identification methods to determine if the cat belongs to someone. This step is critical in reuniting lost cats with their families.

Holding Period and Lost Pet Services

The Tacoma Humane Society implements a mandatory holding period during which efforts are made to locate the cat's owner. This period allows time for lost pet reports to be filed and for owners to be notified. The shelter maintains a database of found cats to assist in matching pets with their owners.

Documentation and Record-Keeping

Detailed records are kept for each found cat, including descriptions, health status, and behavioral notes. These records are essential for tracking the cat's progress through the shelter system and for potential adopters seeking information about the animal.

Care and Rehabilitation Services

After the intake process, found cats receive comprehensive care to address both physical and emotional needs. This phase is crucial for preparing cats for adoption or long-term placement.

Medical Treatment and Vaccination

All found cats are provided with necessary veterinary care, including vaccinations, parasite control, and treatment for any illnesses or injuries. This medical attention ensures they are healthy and ready for interaction with potential adopters.

Behavioral Assessment and Socialization

Behavioral evaluations are conducted to understand each cat's temperament and social needs. For shy or fearful cats, specialized socialization programs help build trust and improve their chances of adoption. These programs may include interaction with trained staff or volunteers and controlled exposure to other animals and humans.

Nutrition and Environment

Cats are fed balanced diets tailored to their age and health requirements. The shelter environment is designed to reduce stress, with separate spaces for different cats to ensure safety and comfort. Enrichment activities are provided to stimulate mental and physical well-being.

Adoption and Rehoming Procedures

One of the primary goals of the Tacoma Humane Society found cats program is to place cats into permanent, loving homes. The adoption process is thorough to ensure the best match between the cat and the adopter.

Adoption Screening and Counseling

Potential adopters undergo a screening process that includes an application, interview, and reference checks. Shelter staff provide counseling on cat care, behavior, and health to prepare adopters for responsible pet ownership.

Adoption Events and Outreach

The Tacoma Humane Society regularly hosts adoption events to showcase found cats and facilitate their transition into new homes. These events often involve partnerships with local businesses and community centers to reach a broad audience.
