These prerequisites are designed to maintain a high standard of instruction and safety within Wisconsin's public schools.

Educational Qualifications

Applicants typically must hold at least a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution. This degree requirement ensures that substitute teachers possess a foundational level of knowledge and skills necessary to manage classrooms effectively. Some districts may accept candidates with an associate degree or specific coursework completed, but the bachelor's degree remains the most common standard.

Background Checks and Clearances

All candidates must undergo a comprehensive background check, including fingerprinting and criminal history review, to qualify for substitute teacher certification. This step is crucial to protect students and maintain a safe learning environment. The Wisconsin DPI requires these clearances as part of the certification application process, and any disqualifying offenses may prevent certification approval.

Additional Requirements
