The restaurant provides nutrition information to facilitate transparency and help customers make informed choices.

Nutrition Information for Wings

Chicken wings are the signature offering at Wild Wing Cafe, available in a variety of flavors and heat levels. The nutrition content of wings depends on factors such as size, breading, frying, and sauce application. Typically, a standard order of six traditional wings can range from 400 to 700 calories or more, with fat content varying accordingly.

Caloric and Macronutrient Breakdown

The calorie content of wings primarily comes from fat and protein. A typical six-piece order of traditional wings contains approximately 40-60 grams of protein and 25-40 grams of fat, depending on preparation. Carbohydrates are generally low unless breading or sugary sauces are involved. Customers seeking lower-calorie options should consider grilled or naked wings without heavy sauces.

Sauce and Flavor Variations

Wild Wing Cafe offers numerous sauce options, including buffalo, barbecue, garlic parmesan, and more. Each sauce adds different calories, fat, and sodium levels. For example, buffalo sauce tends to be lower in calories but higher in sodium, whereas creamy sauces like ranch or blue cheese dressings significantly increase calorie and fat intake when used as dips.

- Buffalo Sauce: Moderate calories, high sodium
- Barbecue Sauce: Higher sugar content, moderate calories
- Garlic Parmesan: Higher fat and calorie content
- Dry Rubs: Lower calories, but may contain sodium

Appetizers and Sides Nutrition Details

In addition to wings, Wild Wing Cafe features a variety of appetizers and side dishes that contribute to the overall nutritional profile of a meal. - Side salad (without dressing): Low calorie, nutrient-rich
- Fries and onion rings: High calorie, high fat
